ABSTRACT

This document contains a four-part checklist designed for use to determine the extent to which elementary school teaching personnel at various levels (teacher, assistant, and aide) have acquired particular competencies. The introduction notes that it is considered a prototype rather than a finished instrument totally inclusive of all competencies. The guide is suggested for use by each of several specialists, each working on-the-job with the teacher at different times. Part 1, "General Behaviors, Qualities and Competencies Characteristic of Teachers in Early Childhood and Elementary Schools," contains 19 items each of which includes three possible descriptive responses. (Sample question: Does the person show sufficient patience and understanding with children?) Part 2, "Specific Behaviors Performed by Certified Teachers in Early Childhood and Elementary Schools," contains 84 items with four possible responses ranging from "Performs this behavior with a high measure of skill and efficiency" to "Not applicable or no basis for judgement." (Sample item: Helps pupils use a teaching machine. Prepares daily activity plans.) Part 3, "Specific Behaviors Performed by Teaching Assistants in Early Childhood and Elementary Schools," and Part 4, "Specific Pehaviors Performed by Aides in Early Childhood and Elementary Schools," contain 37 and 31 items respectively and provide for the same choice of four responses as Part 2. Introduction

The checklist which follows is an initial attempt to provide a guide which would be effective in determining the extent to which teaching personnel at various levels have acquired particular competencies. The authors do not regard this as a finished instrument totally inclusive of all competencies. At this point in its development it is regarded more as prototype which may eventually provide one means of evaluating teacher performance. It should also be pointed out that the authors accept the notion that ceretain of the items are not generally applicable in all school settings. For example, in some schools where full time nurses are in attendance, teachers are not allowed to arminister first aid.

In this guide evaluation is based on professional opinion or judgment. Thus, it is recommended that the evaluators be carefully selected from among the most highly qualified specialists available, and that there be three or more such evaluations made of the subject, each at a different time and by a different specialist. Furthermore, the evaluators should devote considerable working time onthe-job with the subjects in order to provide a base for valid evaluation. In addition, it is recommended that the subject rate himself on each item and be present for interaction with the evaluators whenever evaluation conferences are scheduled.

Directions:

This instrument is designed to assist in the evaluation of teaching behaviors. All items require observation of the teacher on-the-job and the professional judgment of a specialist. After an adequate period of observation, each judge is to check the alternative which best describes the teacher. If none of the descriptions are appropriate, the judge should either adjust the statements or write marginal notes.
